

OTHER AVAILABLE RESOURCES

The Eatonville History Project has other educational resources on logging, which are not in this packet, but can be provided. If you are interested in using any of the below, please contact Rich Williams at 360-455-3298.

Field Trips & Walking Tours

Depending on the time available and funds, we can provide:

- Field Trip to Pack Forest – Pack Forest provides a number of opportunities for groups to learn about forest ecology, forest management, and is a piece of Eatonville’s history.

Tour conducted Chris Raynham (raynham@uw.edu)

Scheduling through Chris’s assistant, Pat Saunders (pats4@uw.edu)

- Walking Tours of the Eatonville Lumber Company site, with photos and information for students. Available tour guides: Dave Langberg, Mike Bertram, Rich Williams

Classroom Speakers

Dave Langberg: Local resident who has spent years in the woods and is full of both logging information and interesting stories.

Mike Bertram: Mike, also a long time resident of Eatonville, has seen the woods from the ground and the air. He’ll give kids interesting take on what it’s like to be a real Ax man.

Ed “Mooch” Smith: Eatonville resident, “Mooch” Smith, is not only a working logger, doing tree removal and milling, he’s also a champion tree climber, having taken many titles at logging competitions. He can talk about the logging today and some of the challenges doing “urban” logging.

Doug Black: Eatonville’s Doug Black and also take kids on a journey through the woods, while never leaving the classroom. Kids will learn what a “Cruiser” really is.

Film

The short film would show images of past logging operations, with a narrator providing background information.

PowerPoint

A PowerPoint presentation can be provided with pictures and information about the area’s logging history.

Eatonville to Rainier Website

The EatonvilletoRainier.com site has been live since April 2011. Every day pictures and information about the local history are added. In fact, Eatonville students have already been browsing. We invite them to check it out and leave any questions.
